

BFMCA membership achieved

Bristol-based DEKS Distribution has been accepted as a member of the British Flue & Chimney Manufacturer's Association (BFCMA), the only trade association for factory-made chimney products.

DEKS Distribution are the UK distributors of the original range of flues and chimneys. Membership of the BFCMA is an important part of this new initiative, with DEKS aiming to make a significant contribution to the objectives of the association.

The BFCMA works closely with the government, public bodies and other key organisations to further the interests of the flue and chimney industry. It is a highly prominent body that influences legislation, regulation and policies at national and international levels, as well as encourages uniform standards of education and training.

DEKS will be represented on technical issues by leading industry expert, and BFCMA member, Mike Loud, who has 30 years experience in the European flue and chimney industry.

David Jones, divisional manager of DEKS Distribution, explains: "Membership of the BFCMA is a huge boost for us, especially as we have recently re-launched the original Selkirk brand of flues and chimneys for the UK residential market. It demonstrates to our customers that we are constantly striving to provide the best possible products and services in the marketplace. This membership, combined with the excellent technical support from Mike, further strengthens the package we offer to our customers."

In addition to the flues and chimneys, DEKS Distribution also specialises in the provision of high quality flashings and washers to the construction and industrial markets.
